

Trip to the Museum of the Bible

November 15, 2018

On a snowy day ten of us went by Metro to the Museum of the Bible. Although the building originally was the icehouse for D.C., it is now completely modern inside.

State of the art displays, including a virtual reality tour of Israel including with actors were presented. For example, an entire Galilee village from two thousand years ago, was depicted, complete with a synagogue and a rabbi. An Israeli rabbi was also at the museum, inscribing a Torah. He entertained us for half an hour.

Although evangelical Christians largely funded the museum, it was more of a history museum than a religious one. Moreover, the historical focus was mostly on The Old Testament.

An added delight was lunch in an excellent deli.
